The Moonburger Experience 2011

By Bill Berry

It started out simple enough, put the word out that I was going to try and go to the 7th Annual Moonshine Lunch Run in Moonshine, Illinois and see who wanted to join me, if anybody. A few members had gone before but last year I went by myself. I had talked to a guy(Mike) at work of my previous trips out to Moonshine and he said he'd like to join me next time and he knew another guy(Greg) at work who wanted to go so I sent them the e-mail with all the info. Then on Tuesday Alan Disher e-mailed me that he wanted to go also and would join me as I rolled by the Sharonville exit on I-275. Sounded like a ride was forming. But Mike and Greg wanted to leave a little later and stop for breakfast even after I explained the Sweet-Roll Lady would have homemade cinnamon rolls and pecan rolls at the lunch run headquarters. Now you all know I'm always up for a breakfast run, but the Sweet-Roll Lady was gonna be up all night making tray after tray of rolls for us bikers to buy with all monies going to a local kids charity so I told Mike and Greg we would meet them at the Moonshine Store.

The last 2 years I went the weather had been cold(30's) but dry. This year the temperature was mid 50's to start but the radar showed a Technicolor blob over central Illinois, so I put on the Michelin-Man suit(Frog-Togs) before starting out. Sure enough about 10 minutes after leaving Loveland I pass under the Sharonville exit and on the entrance ramp is Alan waiting for me, talk about precision. We pull into the rest area in Indiana to see if anybody is there to join us from the west side but no takers. As we are suiting up to leave a group of about 5 bikes go by westbound, at O-dark-thirty, heading towards the rain...gotta be going to Moonshine.

We make it to Greencastle Indiana before the rain starts. From there it keeps picking up in intensity until we are getting hammered in Terra Haute. Rain from all directions, sometimes sideways, lightning, wind, hail, it was gettin' it. As we take the exit to Casey, Illinois the rain lets up to a light rain. The parking lot isn't as crowded as in years past but still a lot of people under the portico trying to stay dry. Once inside there's even more people stalling, milling around until the rain stops. In the conference room I pick up my pre-ordered shirt and locate the Sweet-Roll Lady. We give her a donation and she says "15 seconds in the microwave". She knows her rolls, perfect after 15 seconds.

On the way back out to the bikes we glance at the weather channel in the lobby and sure enough it was hail we rode through. The rain has stopped by now and we gear up to ride down to Moonshine. As we reminisce about the last time we were here and the parade we avoided a couple of guys ask if they can follow us to the store and next thing you know Alan is the parade leader. The 10 miles or so down to the Moonshine Store shows just how much rain there was, most of the fields are flooded with ditches overflowing on to the road in some spots.

As we pull up to the store bikes are starting to park along the streets in each direction maybe 30 or so. It's gonna be risky parking on the grass/mud this year. We find a place on the road by the Amish-Lady selling pie/ice cream. It's about 10:45 our time and I don't see a line but they are ready for a crowd with an additional catering grill setup outside. Once inside there's maybe 20 people in line so we fall in and enjoy the atmosphere. Since the rain has stopped and everybody's in raingear, sitting on the wet picnic tables is not an issue so we find a place and dig in. Alan finds a unique relish over on the condiment table along with all the fixin's.

The Moonshine Store has really prepared for the crowds this year. Besides the extra grill inside as in years past they also had a grill outside from a catering company.

This allowed for two lines plus they had big tubs of drinks on ice outside to ease the wait. They have also fixed up the garage to the right of the store to sell souvenirs, which eases the crush inside. Even the Amish Lady had more help. One girl to take your order/money, one guy to dip the ice cream and a couple of guys making the ice cream while she sliced/served the pies. For a dollar you got about a 1/5 of a pie and an extra half-dollar got you a huge serving-spoon of ice cream.

As we mill around looking at bikes and watching the crowd you could just feel the crowd growing. Every time you looked down the street you'd see another wave of bikes trying to park. I would guess the street to the west of the store easily had bikes parked on the edge for a quarter mile or more.

So we're standing across from the store just taking it all in and this guy walks by with a big camera and tripod. I ask him who he's filming for and he said channel 20 in Springfield Illinois. Next thing you know he ask if he can interview me I say well, er, I don't know, and Alan is over there saying "sure you can, here Bill, let me hold your jacket liner for ya.". So he puts a microphone on me and starts asking all the important questions like "Why all this way for a cheeseburger?", Why in the rain?", "Isn't it dangerous?", "You didn't think about turning around and go home?". Well he said we'd be able to see it on the Internet but I have not found anything, maybe the middle-age Michelin-Man look doesn't make good video. Just as well.

After a couple hours Alan and I decide to start for home and decide on Rt.50 since it's mostly blue skies now. Apparently about that time my friends from work, remember Mike and Greg, are just getting in line for a cheeseburger. Later at a gas stop I get a message from Mike stating that and even though the line was long it moved right along.

The ride home was nice across southern Indiana, past all the swollen creeks and rivers. Each time we stopped I text'd home to see if it was still raining and the last time in Versailles they said the rain had stopped so it was clear sailing all the way home. Got home around 6, just in time to watch a little Nascar (nap).

The Moonshine Lunch Run website says they served 2068 Moonburgers to approximately 1600-1800 bikes. They have a date set for next year of April 14, 2012. It's a great experience that all motorcyclists should enjoy. It's a great way to start the year.

A Riding Weekend

By Tom Ritter

Hi all.

For the past three years, club members and friends have ventured to the western end of North Carolina and stayed at the Iron Horse Motorcycle Lodge near Stecoah, NC for a riding weekend. At our last two monthly club meetings, we began discussing if, when, and where we might choose to hold a club riding weekend this year.

Several of us have talked about finding a suitable place closer to home. By reducing the length of the ride to and from our weekend destination, we are hopeful that additional riders as well as possibly some non-riders may join us. The Red River Gorge area in KY and the Hocking Hills area in OH have been suggested. As in years passed, mid to late September and/or early October seem most preferred by the members.

Our wish list for a facility includes; some private cabins or at least private bedrooms with their own private bathrooms; some private bedrooms with a shared bathroom; some shared bedrooms with a shared bathroom; and some tent camping with bathroom/shower facilities available. We hope to arrange for group dinners with catering being an option. Breakfast arrangements remain undetermined. And, of course, since most of us enjoy an adult beverage or two when the day's riding is done, we are looking for an "alcohol permitted" facility. A place for an evening camp fire would be nice as well.

Due to the separation of lodge rooms, cabins, and tent camping, and their policies on fire pits and alcohol, state parks do not appear to be a desirable option.

Although we are not yet aware of a single facility in the Hocking Hills area that offers everything we may want all in one place, for now we are focusing our efforts in that area. There are lots of good riding roads in that region and plenty to do for non-riders. In addition to a KOA Kampground, Hocking Hills offers literally dozens of homes and/or cabins. Based on our preliminary research, except for a few cabins and the tent camping at the KOA Kampground, you are looking at approximately $100 per night. The availability of ideal cabins/lodges is limited around the dates we are considering. Most of the homes/cabins in Hocking Hills advertise sleeping capacity well in excess of the number of bedrooms. So, obviously some shared bedrooms are contemplated to make maximum use of each unit. This may work for those looking for a less expensive alternative.

Due to the difficulty in finding exactly the right facility/arrangements in Cabins or Lodges in Hocking Hills, we have also investigated a hotel in that area. There's a Holiday Inn Express (HIE) hotel in Logan, Ohio right in the heart of Hocking Hills. And, there's a nice BBQ restaurant within walking distance of the HIE.

To begin to narrow our choices of facilities and weekends, we need to get a rough idea of how many singles and how many couples are interested in joining us for this trip. We also need to know how many private rooms/bath rooms are preferred. I will discuss the possibilities at the May meeting at the Smith's and then post an email similar to this article on the group discussion board. We will then need a preliminary response from those interested.
